SWEET CLOVER, Common in Many Parts of the Country

fixed clover, which is so common along readsides and in waste places in many parts of the country, is rapidly gaining in favor as a cultivated crop. This is due to its value for soil improvement, for pastures, and for hay. There are three species of sweet clover commonly found in the United States. The lifennial yellow-flowered species white flowered species (Melliotus alba) are valuable over a wide area, while the annual yellow-flowered species and Southwest, where it is grown as a winter cover and green manure crop. With the exceptions of a few localiiles, white sweet clover is grown almust entirely. This is due to the fact that it yields more forage and produces larger roots than the other species. The white flowered species is ordinarily referred to as sweet clover, while the other two species are called yellow sweet clover.

Breat clover resembles alfalfa when young, but can be distinguished from it by its bitter taste, its smooth shiny leaves, and later, when in bloom, by the long, loose splke-like arrangement of white dowers in contrast to the close purple clusters of alfalfa flowers. One clover is its root system. During the soils, but it will make a better growth first season of growth the roots often on fertile soil. It prefers soils of limereach a diameter of one half inch at stone origin. Clay soils which are acid the crown of the plant. On account should be limed before excet clover is large quantity of vegetable matter is sistant to alkali, and plants may be added to the soil, even when the tops alkaline that little cise than sait grass of the plants are removed for hay.

Uses of Sweet Clover.

There are few plants which will put waste land or run-down farms into con- thoroughly compacted seed bed with dition for producing crops as quickly just enough loose soil on top to couble as sweet clover. live stock, especially in places where more desirable types of hay will not grow successfully. Ordinarily some trouble is experienced in getting stock to cal sweet clover at Arst, on account of its bitter taxto, but after they have been accustomed to calling it no trouble is experienced. A high percentage of digestible-protein is contained in the hay.

Sweet clover makes excellent pasturnge for horses, sheep, cattle, and hogs. Probably the easiest way to create an appetite for this plant is to commence (Melifotus officinalis) and the blannish pasturing stock on it very early in other green feed has started. A sucficient number of animals should be kept in a sweet clover pasture to keep importance except in the extrane South it graved rather closely. This will and woody and will also induce an abundant growth of young shoots. Stock when pastured upon sweet clover make galus which compare very favorably with those obtained from either ulfalfa or red clover.

There is very little danger of bloating when stock are pastured on sweet clover, but it is sufest to avoid turning stock into a sweet clover pasture when it is wet with dew or rain or when stock are unsually hungry. Sweet clover will also thrive well during midsummer droughts und produce much early and late pasturage.

Boll Requirements.

Sweet clover has the ability to thrive on poor clay as well as on poor sandy found in the West grawing on soils so is able to survive.

Where a county bullds a good road nd soon lets it become rutty, washed out, or uneven, who or what is principally to blame? As a result of a study, of conditions in a number of counties, road specialists of the Department of Agriculture at Washington, D. C., are inclined to place the responsibility upon the following defects in road management, some or all of which are found in all counties where good roads are not properly repaired and main-

1. County boards, although having full administrative authority, appear not to attach to their official action in road matters the importance or legal effect which it should have.

2. County boards do not generally have sufficient accounting control of ronds funds to know what is available for any particular project, where funds have been or where existing balances are to be expended. 3. Lack of any systematic practice counties makes it very difficult to carry out over even a single year any persistent maintenance policy, because funds officially obligated for maintenance purposes are not protected against sporadic and irregular drafts for miscellancous purposes. The greatest likelihood consequently exists everywhere that there will be no balance in the maintenance fund in the last half or third of the year, although only a part of the fund allotted may have been spent.

4. Local labor available for maintenance work is made dissatisfied by flie constant, unintelligent, and unfavorable criticism of those using the road. 5. Maintenance centinuing over a period of years—the ultimate indispensable condition of effective metatehance—is jeopardized by the lack of accounting control that will prevent spending next year's current income in this year. 6. The lack of skilled supervision in construction and the effect of this in increasing the cost or in making of-Yestive maintenance impossibly expensive is everywhere seen. 7. The county authorities are commonly opposed to following suggestions for maintenance that involve tying up road funds in any way, such as purchasing materials in advance to store along the road for making repairs or maintaining the road surface. What is said in regard to counties may also be said in regard to towns.

EACH ONE IS A TINY WORLD.

If All Should Burst Their Walls at Once the Universe Would Dissolve In an Instant-A Magic Force That Science is Seeking to Control.

Do you remember when Aladdin had, at last, got down into the cave under the tree, what inexpressible marvels he found around him? But among all the riches of the cave there was only one little dust covered thing that was really worth the risk be had run. because it alone was truly novel and unlike anything else in the world-the necromantic lamp that had the genie for its slave. With that in his posses sion the poor boy was more powerful than all the monarchs in the worldprovided that he knew how to handle the lamp, and that knowledge came to him by accident.

I have just been pondering over some statements by Jean Becquerel, the French physicist, about the contents of the atoms of which matter is composed, and they have forcibly recalled Aladdin's adventures to my mind. The interior of an atom is a little world infinitely more marvelous than the cave that contained the mugic lamp, and it conceals powers incomparably greater than that of Aladdin's good

To the scientific imagination the inside of an atom is inversely as wondrous as the starry beavens. It is infinite power packed into infinitesimal space. That, of course, is an exaggeration; but this is a case in which one has to speak in imposing figures; because the facts surpass all ordinary experience.

Let those who will sound notes of doll despair,

And fill with lamentation all the air-The cheery note of Love, unto this end: That they who on some path of dark ness grope

May find their way to Light through gleams of Hope!
